

GRADUATE WORKERS ARE UNDER ATTACK

Since the historic 2016 Columbia decision reaffirming union rights for graduate workers, more than 20,000 of us have come together to form our unions, and tens of thousands more are currently organizing.

In a desperate attempt to stifle the incredible momentum of the graduate union movement, the Trump NLRB has proposed a rule which would reverse the Columbia decision in order to strip away our victories, and deny us our rights as workers.

As part of the rule-making process, the NLRB has opened a brief public comment period that gives us until January 15th to submit as many comments as possible in opposition to this rule.

SUBMIT A COMMENT

AFTACADEMICS.ORG/WEAREWORKERS

NLRB COMMENT PERIOD NOTES:

- Comments MUST BE UNIQUE to be counted
- Comments do not need to be in English
- Topics to consider in your comment:
 - What does your graduate labor involve?
 - How does that labor benefit the university?
 - How is your role as a worker distinct from your role as a student?
 - Would you be funded if you did not work?
 - Do you have another source of income?
 - Why do you support graduate unions?
 - What difference does, or would, a union contract make for you?

Follow this campaign on social media!

Amplify grad stories by sharing your NLRB comment, and the comments of your colleagues, using the hashtag #WEAREWORKERS and tagging us with @AFTACADEMICS

@AFTACADEMICS

FACEBOOK.COM/AFTACADEMICS

INFO@AFTACADEMICS.ORG

AFTACADEMICS.ORG